“ QUICK SUMMARY

Lexington and Concord are not traditional vacation destinations. They are places travelers visit to experience one of the most important moments in American history.

On April 19, 1775, the first battles of the American Revolution took place here, and much of the landscape remains remarkably similar to how it appeared that day.

For history enthusiasts, few destinations in the United States are more meaningful. For everyone else, Lexington & Concord work best as a half-day or full-day addition to a Boston or New England itinerary.
